PORTNOX NETWORK ACCESS CONTROL

Network-Access-Control (NAC) solutions are designed to manage network authentication, check compliance of corporate endpoints, and enforce violation of both.

About Portnox CLEAR

Portnox CLEAR is a cloud-based continuous monitoring and risk-based access control solution for devices accessing the corporate network. It performs real-time monitoring and analysis of hundreds of end-user device parameters: configurations, applications, activities, vulnerabilities, and anomalies. It then performs risk assessment and makes an access-control decision.

CLEAR also provides network visibility, discovery and enables answering various questions about the connected device, such as: which software is installed and patched, which processes are running, which peripheral devices are or were attached, with which other devices is it communicating, etc.

The solution consists of a cloud-based analytic engine, RADIUS in the cloud, and a light-weight agent installed on end-devices.

The solution supports any network layer, continuously monitors and remediates devices, even when there are not connected to a corporate network, which makes it perfect for scenarios that require remote accessibility.

How can Portnox CLEAR support your business?

With more people working from home, the requirement for agility and freedom to do their jobs effectively increases too. These people are likely to be using their own personal devices, in addition to company provided equipment.

As an IT Manager trying to secure the company network, it has become more difficult to achieve visibility and determine who is gaining access to the company network for genuine reasons, vs malicious intent. There is then the issue of how you control that access should there be a need for it to be revoked. Portnox CLEAR enables you to keep control of your network.
