

IBM Baseline.

Get an overview of your software and licences for more transparency in the confusing licence jungle.

Over-licensing and under-licensing cost companies a lot of money. Capital that could be put to better use lies idle. IBM Baseline creates transparency for your software and licences. Bechtle helps you to gain an overview.

The IBM baseline is a snapshot of your deployed IBM software and the existing licences. We take the software inventory from the IBM Licence Metric Tool (ILMT) or your existing software distribution tool. Alternatively, we install our scanning tool, which prepares the data accordingly and searches your network for existing IBM software. At the same time, we create a complete and retrospective licence inventory and compare this with the installed software. The resulting report - which corresponds to a compliance report (Delta) - gives you an overview of your under- or over-licensing, contains recommendations on how to rectify it and provides further important information about your licence management.
